UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

he Authority of the States Over Local Cor-porations—The Power to Tax Non-Resident Shareholders—Vulidity of Such Tax Under the Federal Constitution.

J. B. Page, Treasurer of Vermont, vs. E. Blake. J. B. Page, Treasurer of Vermont, vs. E. Blake.—
This action was brought to restrain the treasurer of the Vermont and Canada Railroad Company from paying and the Treasurer of the State of Vermont from collecting a State tax of one per cent upon stocks of the company held by the petitioner. In 1854 the Legislature of Vermont passed an act requiring the treasurers of all railroad corporations within the State to pay annually into the Treasury within the State to pay annually into the Treasury of the State a tax of one per cent on all the shares held in such corporations by persons residing withneed in such corporations by persons residing with-out the State whenever such corporations pay an an-nual profit of six per cent or more. In 1861 the Vermont and Canada road, by its profits, came within the provisions of this law, and an at-tempt being made to collect the tax on the stock of the petitioner, he being a non resident, this action was brought to enjoin the proceeding. On ction was brought to enjoin the proceeding, the trial of the cause in the Circuit Court for the istrict of Vermont Judge Smalley held the law athorizing the tax to be repugnant to the constitution of the United States and invalid as to the petier and as to all other citizens of the United States ho are non-residents of Vermont and stockholders as taken to this court, where it is maintained that that provision of the constitution which says that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and Immun'ties of citizens in the several states" does not prohibit the tax in question. The construction of this provision, as held below, confounds the word "citizens" with the word "residents," and claims for the citizens of any one State all the privileges and immunities of the residents in his and every other State. Such a construction is unauthorized and impracticable. It is the citizens privilege to vote at elections, but it is not true that a citizen of any one State mas the right to exercise this privilege in each of the several States of the lunion at the same time; and because the laws of the several States confine the privilege of voting to the resident citizens. It is not true, than, that when a State allows a privilege only to a resident, and forbids it to all others, that if thereby infringes this provision of the constitution. The law allows the privilege to the resident and not to the citizen of the State, except as a resident, and therefore it cannot be claimed by cit.zens of other States, for they certainly cannot chaim more privileges than the citizen of the State. The clear, true and unquestionable construction of this provision of the constitution is that no State by its legislation shall forbut to the citizen of another State any privilege or immunity which it allows to its own. But it is equally clear of the State. The clear, true and unquestionable construction of this prevision of the constitution is that no State by its iegislation shall forthed to the citizen of amother State any privilege or immunity which it allows to its own. But it is equally clear that no State is by any provision compelled to grant or allow to the citizen of another State what it forbids to its own. Every State may grant to its own citizens whatever privileges or immunities it thinks proper, and such only, provided it leaves the same to be enjoyed by the citizens of the other States on the same conditions and under the same circumstances. The privilege of voting, being conflued to residents, makes no distinction between the citizens of the other States of the States. Taxing higher the property in a State belonging to a non-resident than the same kind of property belonging to a resident makes no distinction between the citizens of the States. It subjects that species of property belonging as well to its own citizens as to the citizens of other States, often some discriminating tax, unless they are residents, and it relieves them all alike on their being or becoming residents. The tax complained of in this case is laid on that part of the capital stock of which non-residents are holders; but it is precisely the same on citizens of vermont as on the citizens of other States, and it reaches none who are residents, of whatever State they are citizens. The tax complained of in this case is laid on that part of the capital stock of which non-residents are holders; but it is precisely the same on citizens of vermont as on the citizens of other States, the same on residents are holders; but it is precisely the same on citizens of other States, the same on the citizens of the holder and none over his property, for the property is just as much away from the State as the person is and precisely as the property is a mere right of the citation or duty corresponding to the right does and must exist ensewher, for thresides in another being. or shareholder, and so must inhere in him personally. The idea of a right separate from the person to whom it belongs is impossible. The obligation or duty corresponding to the right does and must exist eisewhere, for treades in another being. It is no answer to this view to say that this corporation, being the creature of State law. State law may therefore impose upon the persons having property in it such burdens and exactions as the Legislature may see fit, because no such right to interfere with the private property of the shareholder was reserved to the State in the charter, but, on the contrary, it was provided that the shares should be personal property, and no limitation was made as to who or what class of persons should own them, and under these provisions the stock was faken and became the individual property of the shareholders, after which, upon settled principles, the State could not recede from or after its contract or change the nature or impair the value of the property which it had permitted persons to acquire in the corporation. Besides, i. the principle caimed were conceded it would tollow that the Legislature of a State might confiscate, at its mere will and pleasure, the whole projectly which a corporation had acquired under its statutory creation, and thus destroy, by a mere arbitrary edict, not only the franchises and privileges which it had conterred upon the corporation, but all the property of private persons which had been invested in its operations. The late Jacob Colamer, who was formerly conused in this case, maintained the right of the State to levy the tax. It is now represented by ex-Sonator Poland for appellant and Senator Edmunds for appellee.

THE SUFFRAGE TIMETRING IN CONGRESS.

The Radicals at Loggerhends on the Subject. [From the Albany Evening Journal (radical) Feb. 2.] Prom the Albany Evening Journal (radical) Feb. 2.]
The constitutional amendment introduced by Mr. Boutwell, providing that no State shall deny the right of suffrage to any of its citizens on account of race, color or previous condition, having been adopted by a decisive majority in the House, will undoubtedly receive favorable consideration in the Senate, and go before the several Legislatures for acceptance or rejection. Mr. Boutwell himself estimates that the vole by States will full three short of the number required to secure its persection as part of the tundamental law; and for that reason he wished to supplement the amendment with a bill intended to carry out the same purposes. The wisdom of this step would have been exceedingly questionable, even if the right to take it should be admitted. For a law adopted by congress may be repeated by Congress; and if that body can enlarge the surfrage it must be equally competent to put restrictions upon it. We can easily see how dangerous such a precedent might become in the event of a democratic majority in Congress, which is to be looked upon as a future possibility.

in Congress, which is to be looked upon as a future possibility.

[From the Chicago Post (radical), Feb. 1.]

We take it for granted that the attempt to endow Congress with the right to regulate suffrage in the States will be a failure. The bill now before that body for that purpose is doomed to defeat, and we shan not be sorry when it falls. In whatever concerns the weiflare of the black race the country has as much to lear from the impatience and inconsiderate haste of the extreme republicans as from the reactionary enors of the democrate, and this blind zeal with which not crity the usages of the federal and local governments, but the decuarations of the Chicago platform are assuiced is evidence of what we say, ceneral Grant, the candidate elected upon that platform, has not taken his seat, yet here is an enort to kick from under him one of the fundamental decurines upon which he won the approval of the people. The effort is ill thined, unincessary and almost revolutionary. It argues a want of idelay to all State efforts that the constitutional decirine in which all sound republicans believe—which betokens the rapid and dangerous centralization of power in federal hands.

(From the Chicago Republican (radical) Feb. 1.)

I becomes Congress to look carefully into the full meaning and authority of the proposed amendment. Better have none than one of domain import. What we need just how is equality of political franchise. If the rebellion has made some exceptions necessary there should be as few as is consistent with the general welfare. Nothing should be done in state—nothing in the spirit of mere registrated to every clizzen of the republic that does not confict with higher interests. The sooner we can bury the past and bring back a once insurgent people to a genuine allegance to the national flag, the sooner we shall have pence, repose and quietude. Ferhaps universal suffrage and universal aumesty are as yet impracti able; yet we feel assured that Congress, in framing its proposed amendment, by approaching that end as nearly as clasumstances will asimit, will most nearly get at a solution of our present difficulties and will cuatrize—if these not absolutely cure, the wounds inflicted upon the republic.

FROM A WEDDING TO A GRAVE. Enraged Brother 8

From the Pulaski (Tenn.) Citizen, Jan. 29.]
Te have learned the particulars of a tragic affatch occurred near Cornersville, in this county, to days ago. A young man whose hother was violently does do the match, and who swore they never aid marry. The heroic though pernaps misguided ing lady, yielding to the persuastive arguments love, consented to an elopement. Accordingly clandestinely repaired to a neighboring house consummate their ardent desire. But the reso

MORE ADROIT SWINDLING IN SYRACUSE.

Erom the Albany Argus, Feb. 3.]

A bold and successful swindle, perpetrated in Syracuse, has lately been made public, although the name of the party swindled has been withheld. It seems that about the middle of last month a well-dressed, well-bred and apparently well to-do gentleman entered one of the best hotels in that city, registered his name, took up his quarters in the house and succeeded in making himself very agreeable to the inndord. So much so, indeed, that that personage, usually very particular in the matter, overlooked the trining circumstance that his guest had no baggage. From day to day the stranger was on the lookent for a package containing $2,000, which of course he expected by express from New York. Many days clapsed before the package arrived, and some sight doubts as to its ever making its appearance had begun to dawn upon the landord's mind. One day, however, just as the train for the West was about leaving the depot the fortunate possessor of the money package appeared with it in his hand. Everything about it appeared to be regular; it was samped and sealed as usual, and the cavelope surely enough marked with the amount, $2,000, perfectly plain and legible. The owner of the package was in haste to take the Western train for Clyde, where he had important business to transact. The train was about leaving, and he could not spare the time to breas the envelope and count the money. Would the landord lend him $400 until he returned in the evening and keep the $2,000 as scaprity. Of course for such an agreeable gentleman the landord would do this fave't willierly, and keep the package until the return of the owner. The stranger started for Clyde, and the money package containing $2,000, as supposed, was locked up in the safe. Pays passed, but, singular to relate, the owner of such an amount did not return for it. Having consuited a lawyer, who told him that he had been swindied. The handlord finally opened the supposed money package, and found, as most people would suppose, was locked up in the
